

Human Capital

Human capital is part of an intellectual capital of the organization. It includes especially people skills and tacit knowledge. This is a potential hidden in people's heads, which may not be captured, but for the organization it is highly desirable to be able to share and use this potential.

Related concepts and methods:

- › People, human resources in the organization
- › Organizational Capital
- › Management by competencies
- › Social capital

Related management field:

- › Human Resources Management