It was that guys like Isaiah and NBA 2K21 MT Kyrie Thomas would get loaded repeatedly. Even though they had high ratings, they played like scrubs since they could not be made to play like their real life counterparts.

Adding a few of the badges, while unrealistic, made them really perform as though they are assumed to and separated them from scrubs that were possibly a little taller that were far better. I really do agree that a few badges need tuning. There are plenty of times where rim guards like Rudy Gobert do not block a layup however the shot at the rim still alters through the fear of being blocked.

That is currently in NBA 2K21 and it is called contesting a shooter. If Gobert does not competition in real life, people aren't bricking simply because they're usually afraid of him. Sometimes he and other excellent rimprotecting guys in the NBA just kind of imitation like they're going to leap up and block, but then they do not because they understand they should nevertheless guard other men right under the hoop, but that fake does mess up the man with the ball just a little bit. But yeah usually that only operates when the man is a significant center for blocking shots known.

You imitation aid defense to get the ball handler to Cheap 2K21 MT generate a choice tho that is bad not to change the shooter, you are just hoping to get them to pick up their dribble early and make shot or a pass. Bright players will not bite on this. Since there's not any counterplay to it intimidator is a mechanic, it nerfs the place around the rim essentially.
